Final Fantasy XIV TTRPG Starter Set Bonus Content

As a bard, your songs resound across the battlefield, inspiring your allies and bolstering their courage.

Like other physical ranged DPS jobs, you have a multitude of abilities that can damage or otherwise hamper your foes. On your turn, you can make use of your Arrow Volley trait to attack not once but twice, and potentially even three times if you use the Barrage ability in tandem with it. Venomous Bite + Windbite inflicts a potent DOT, while Straight Shot packs a significant punch, though it can only be used while under the effect of Straight Shot Ready.

But what sets you apart from other projectile slingers is your capacity for empowering your party through song. When you use a song ability such as Mage's Ballad, it grants you a Bardsong enhancement that the entire party benefits from. You gain access to an additional song ability at level 40—Army's Paeon—allowing you more freedom to choose the right song for the right occasion. Take care to remind your allies of the benefits your Bardsong confers, lest they forget to take them into account!

Typically, you'll want to use a song ability before performing a primary action. However, if you want to take advantage of the Bardsong enhancement granted on your previous turn, you can perform a primary action first, reaping the benefits of the enhancement a second time, before using a new song ability.
